2. BUSINESS MATCHING EVENT HELD JOINTLY BY OCCI AND THE JAPANESE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY (JCCI) IN SINGAPORE

A recent business matching event held jointly by OCCI and the Japanese Chamber of Commerce and Industry (JCCI) in Singapore proved so popular that extra events are now being planned to handle the overflow of applicants. The event provided a forum for SMEs and mid-scale companies to pitch their products to Isetan Singapore, which operates four department stores in Singapore.

The event concentrated on foods, ladies' accessories, men's fashions, educational products, and lifestyle and household items, and Isetan's buyers saw tremendous potential in the various offerings, particularly those that were new to the Singapore market.

Although the event was held online due to Covid-19, interest was far higher than even the organizers dared to hope, with OCCI alone receiving applications from around 100 companies eager to expand sales channels and seek new business opportunities. In all, 154 applications were received via OCCI, JCCI in Singapore, and JETRO, and 39 companies were selected to participate. Given the high number of applications, the organizers are planning second and third editions of the event.

3. OCCI URGES GOVERNOR OF JAPAN'S CENTRAL BANK, BANK OF JAPAN TO CONTINUE FINANCIAL SUPPORT FOR SMES

On September 27, 2021, OCCI and the other three major Osaka economic organizations held an online meeting with Haruhiko Kuroda, governor of the Bank of Japan.

OCCI Chairperson Hiroshi Ozaki urged Mr. Kuroda to continue to provide funding for SMEs and assistance for business rebuilding, noting that the chaos caused by Covid-19 is becoming entrenched long-term and businesses in a broad range of industries are feeling the pinch, as illustrated by increasing use of emergency rescheduling mechanisms to delay loan repayments by up to a year. He also stressed the importance of monetary backing in the post-Covid era, including rebuilding or continuation support for enterprises seeking to expand or pivot into new fields; the 2025 World Expo in Osaka, which is focused on sparking innovation; and businesses working in areas like carbon-neutral solutions, which have high growth potential.

In response, Mr. Kuroda stated his intention to continue offering funding assistance for businesses under special support programs instituted in the wake of Covid-19, and said he would not hesitate to initiate further quantitative easing if it was deemed necessary. He added that he was eager to support businesses seeking to move forward with digitalization, to tackle climate change, and to innovate. Toshimitsu Ogi, chairperson of Shinsaibashi Mitsuya (operator of various dining establishments), appealed to Mr. Kuroda for targeted funding support for the dining industry, saying that many businesses in this sector were struggling under the weight of debts they could not repay because operating restrictions prevented them from earning income.

Mr. Kuroda replied that there would be a recovery in in-person services as more people were vaccinated. Not only was he hopeful that shopping arcades and other local businesses could recover their former buzz and bustle, but he was also ready to offer ongoing steadfast funding support.

5. OSAKA AND MANCHESTER TEAM UP TO SEEK CARBON NEUTRALITY UNDER EU IURC PROGRAM

Osaka City has announced the start of a partnership with Greater Manchester in the UK. The partnership comes as part of Osaka's membership of the EU's International Urban and Regional Cooperation (IURC) program.

The IURC program promotes sustainable urban development by pairing cities, one from the EU and one from elsewhere in the world, to work together on a shared challenge-climate change, for instance. The intention of the program is that by sharing initiatives, the participants can discover breakthroughs for sustainability in urban development.

Osaka's stated goal is carbon neutrality by 2050, and the city has identified decarbonization as an area of high priority. Manchester, meanwhile, has ambitions to become carbon neutral by 2038-twelve years earlier than the UK's target date.

Osaka and Manchester have begun sharing their carbon neutrality initiatives and plans with the aim of encouraging the adoption and spread of innovative environmental technologies and broader participation by businesses and citizens in decarbonization efforts.

For its part, OCCI will work in tandem with Osaka City to provide robust support for SMEs, such as seminars on how to incorporate decarbonization into business management.
